Substance Abuse Treatment and Prevention in Baltimore City

A Directory of Service Providers

Baltimore Substance Abuse Systems (bSAS) sets the direction, standards and spending priorities for Baltimore City’s comprehensive prevention, treatment, and recovery response to drug and alcohol abuse.

A nonprofit, quasi-governmental organization, bSAS plans new services, administers public funding, oversees service delivery, and improves the quality and accessibility of services for uninsured and underinsured residents of Baltimore City.

bSAS advocates for resources and ensures public accountability for programs within the citywide system of partner organizations. Together with its partners, bSAS delivers innovative programs making progress toward restoring the health of people and communities ravaged by substance abuse.

For more information, please call bSAS at 410.637.1900 or visit us at www.bsasinc.org.

Types of Services

Baltimore City provides a comprehensive system of substance abuse treatment services across a range of modalities to meet the varied needs of clients.

Most programs are publicly funded by Baltimore Substance Abuse Systems, the Baltimore City Health Department, the Maryland Alcohol and Drug Abuse Administration, or other government agencies. Some programs receive private funding.

Adolescent (Youth) – These programs provide drug-free outpatient services or residential services specifically for youth. They generally include support services for family members and may include individual, family, or group counseling. Services also are provided to children of substance abusers.

Correctional/Jail-Based – Counseling and rehabilitation services provided in a prison or other correctional facility.

Detoxification – Outpatient – Medication and counseling given on an outpatient basis (non-residential) to help individuals discontinue illicit drug use, manage withdrawal symptoms, and begin the process of recovering from addiction.

Detoxification – Residential – Medication and counseling given in a residential facility to help individuals discontinue illicit drug use, manage withdrawal symptoms, and begin the process of recovering from addiction.

DVI Program – Educational program for drivers convicted of driving while impaired by alcohol and/or drugs. Programs offer, at minimum, six weekly 2-hour sessions using a curriculum which covers various topics on substance abuse and addiction such as the scope and patterns of impaired driving; effects of substances; relationship of substance use with crime, health, family and other problems; and treatment resources.

Medication-Assisted Outpatient Treatment for Adults – Methadone – Non-residential counseling, medication and other rehabilitation services for the detoxification or maintenance treatment of heroin or other opioid dependence, and other substance abuse. Services include individual, group and family counseling; educational and skill development; medical care; and support groups.

Medication-Assisted Outpatient Treatment for Adults – Buprenorphine - Non-residential counseling, medication and other rehabilitation services for the detoxification or maintenance treatment of heroin or other opioid dependence, and other substance abuse. Services include individual, group and family counseling; educational and skill development; medical care; and support groups.

Non-Traditional Settings – Screening, referrals and assessment treatment services are provided to clients in non-traditional settings such as criminal justice, juvenile justice, and other service agencies.

Outpatient Treatment (Intensive/Standard) – Non-residential programs provide diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation for alcohol or drug abusers whose physical and emotional status allows them to function with support in their usual environments. Services include individual, group, and family counseling; drug/alcohol education; referral; and support groups. Standard outpatient treatment is usually for one to three hours per week. Intensive outpatient treatment is nine hours or more per week.

Residential Treatment – Halfway Houses – Transitional residential care facilities provide time-limited services to clients who have received prior evaluation or treatment in a primary or intermediate care program. These clients are expected to seek employment and progress toward personal and economic self-sufficiency. Services include case management; social and vocational skills development; supportive counseling; and essentials of daily living such as shelter, meals, and clothing.

Residential Treatment – Intermediate Care Facility (ICF) – ICF is a residential treatment facility for alcohol and drug abuse clients who are ambulatory and do not require hospitalization. Intermediate Care Facility programs provide an intensive treatment regimen of individual and group therapy as well as other activities aimed at the physical, psychological, and social recovery of the addicted individual. Clients usually remain in residence for 28 days. Services include: medical care; individual, group, and family counseling; essentials of daily living such as shelter, meals, clothing; and support groups.

Residential Treatment – Therapeutic Community and Long-Term Residential Treatment – Intensive treatment usually lasting 6 months or more in a structured residential environment for individuals who are unable to maintain abstinence from illicit substances in the community. Services include individual, group and family counseling; educational and skill development; support groups; and other rehabilitation activities.

Residential Treatment – Women & Children – Intensive treatment usually lasting 6 months or more in a structured residential treatment facility with services for women, and women and their children. Services include individual, group, and family counseling; parenting skills training and other rehabilitation activities.
Prevention Strategies

By keeping people from abusing drugs or alcohol, prevention programs protect individuals, families, and communities from the negative effects of abuse. Baltimore’s prevention services are delivered by 15 community-based providers. All prevention service providers deliver one or more Center for Substance Prevention (CSAP), evidence-based prevention curricula. Evidence-based SAMHSA programs have been proven to reduce substance use and abuse.

For many years, bSAS has funded five state-certified treatment and prevention programs. Clients include youth who have experimented with drugs and those at risk for future use. Families and communities also benefit from prevention programs.

Prevention programs provide:

- Information – newsletters, speakers, special events, Internet-based content, and advertising
- Education – life skills training, problem-solving, leadership skills training, and conflict resolution
- Problem Identification – hotlines, parent groups, and student assistance programs
- Alternative Activities – field trips, inter-generational programs, arts, clubs, and sports
- Community Mobilization and Support – supporting and coordinating groups that share goals to solve problems
- Environmental and Social Policy Change – identify, create, and change relevant public policies, ordinances, and laws to benefit the community
